PNNL'S Center for Global Security

Answering the questions:

- ▶ What are the emerging new classes of threats—biological, chemical, cyber, information theft, explosives, weapons of mass destruction—or something not yet seen?
- ▶ What strategies and technologies will future attackers deploy?
- ▶ How should the science, technology, and legislative communities focus their investments to best prepare the nation against future harm?

Aligning Technology Solutions to Address Over-the-Horizon Threats

As the world's geopolitical landscape shifts, so do threats to this nation. To confront these challenges, we must lay the groundwork today for solutions that address the next five years and beyond.

WHAT WE DO

Pacific Northwest National Laboratory's Center for Global Security brings together national and global security experts, policy makers, and the private sector to address future threats by

- ▶ catalyzing forward-looking national security solutions for the U.S. Government
- ▶ bridging the gap between policy development and technology implementation

WHAT WE OFFER

- ▶ Focused insights from a broad community about the highest-priority emerging and over-the-horizon security threats and issues
- ▶ Analysis results to support U.S. policymakers and the science and technology community in making informed and strategic decisions about future research and development investments
- ▶ Window into a robust portfolio of technology expertise

WHO WE ARE

- ▶ A component of the National Security Directorate of the Pacific Northwest National Laboratory, a U.S. Department of Energy national laboratory with more than 2,000 staff who are addressing national security problems
- ▶ Trusted, objective source of national security expertise at senior levels of government and policy bodies
- ▶ Leader of multi-stakeholder regional, national, and international security initiatives
